KEVIN'S CAREER

Dr Kevin Snee, has had an extensive leadership career spanning 30+ years in healthcare, including two decades at a Chief Executive level.

Uniquely he has led across the spectrum of healthcare from primary and community through to tertiary and acute service settings. This includes large metro and urban settings as well as rural and remote communities in New Zealand and the United Kingdom.

He trained originally as a public health physician and was a Director of Public Health in the UK before becoming a Chief Executive.

He has a reputation of success in revitalising organisations, leading clinical and financial turnarounds, establishing robust performance management and accountability frameworks and ensuring excellent in clinical and corporate governance.

His experience includes whole of system leadership roles that require complex stakeholder engagement and the management and performance oversight of subcontracted providers.

Notably he also has a reputation for effectively leading organisations through major and complex challenges that have required maintaining community and political confidence such as the Havelock North water crisis, a major cyber-attack and the global pandemic.

Kevin's experience includes strategic governance and transition roles such as the reform of New Zealand's district health board system.
